Hag Y		Under S. 23 of the Stamp Regs, the stamp duty in the case of a conveyance is payable by the grantee, i.e. the purchaser, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary. The balance will therefore have to pay the duty. I have no reply here to show that "the balance" enjoys exemption from stamp duty. But taking the purchaser to be the Govt of M.D. the Mahanaga, the proviso to S-3 confers an exemption in favour of Govt. If it cannot be so held, then an order of remission will have to be published in the Gazette under S-9. The Secretary writes that the list of exemptions under the Stamp Regs may be obtained from head-quarters. Please do so at once. The papers received from the Head Quarters refer to the ^{redemption} ~~exemption~~ of stamp duty on documents executed by or in favour of Agricultural Banks & the exemption of duty on receipts issued by residents or municipalities to Govt Depts acknowledging payments of more than Rs 20.

In sending a Draft Deed for conveyance thereof, Mr. Justice Nanjundayya remarks that as the Stamp for a conveyance has to be (in the absence of an agreement to the contrary) borne by the Palace Department (the Vendee it is exempt from Duty. The Palace enjoys the privilege of exemption from Taxation, &c, in Mysore. The Deed was submitted to H.H. the Maharaja whose orders on the subject the Assistant Private Secretary conveys to me in the following terms :-

It is alright about the Draft Deed of conveyance which H.H. fully approves of as also the exemption from Stamp fee about which the necessary action may be taken now."
